

Healthcare Workers and Covid 19

Santosh Badure*

Aurora's Technological & Research Institute, India, E-mail: santoshbadure13@gmail.com

Covid 19, pandemic of the century, harm the entire humankind brought into sharp focus the need for health care reforms that promote universal access to affordable care.

Attack of virulent coronavirus, rapid spread left the millions of people vulnerable, demanding swift, coordinated political action to ensure access to affordable care.

Healthcare sector, front line workers primary objective to break the chain of corona virus posed a major challenge arisen due to the unprecedented outbreak.

The current generation fetched the benefits of the global digital era, well equiped citizens with digital communicating gadgets like smart phones, laptop's, computer, IOT (internet of things) devices faciliated and eased the communicating, organising the ecosystem to serve the community.

The development and evolving pattern of virtual technology has become the game changer in healthcare sector. the virtual visit in between the clinicians and patients via has brought a major relief to the community during the covid pandemic.

Since the beginning of the outbreak, health care providers have been shown support, solidarity and gratitude than they ever have.

Yet, attacks on health care have continuously been reported and now also include incidents linked to the COVID-19 pandemic across the world.

As per the report published in WHO titled "Attacks on health care in the context of COVID-19"

Eight kind of attacks have been noted:

1. Physical assault
2. Psychological threat
3. Individual weapon
4. Denial of services
5. Obstruction
6. Eviction from home
7. Cyber attack
8. Heavy weapon

The unprecedented global outbreak of coronavirus 19 put healthcare workers under immense pressure and stretched others beyond their capacity.

Lengthy working hours, pandemic panic, danger of getting infected, working in designed suits turned to be difficult task for healthcare workers, despite of which the healthcare heroes didn't give up and served the community.

A million thanks to the healthcare workers!!!!